forms

In French, few nouns can stand alone. Most need to be introduced or 'determined' by an article. As in English, an article is characterized as either definite ('the') or indefinite ('a', 'an'). In addition, French articles are also masculine or feminine, singular or plural, according to the gender and number of the noun they determine. Here are the definite articles in French:

Masculine singular: le ( l' )	Tex le tatou Joe-Bob l' écureuil	Tex the armadillo Joe-Bob the squirrel
Feminine singular: la ( l' )	Bette la chatte l' Université du Texas	Bette the cat (female) The University of Texas
Masculine and feminine plural: les	les tatous les écureuils les chats les universités	the armadillos the squirrels the cats the universities

élision and liaison

In the examples above, note that le and la both become l' when they precede a noun beginning with a vowel or a silent h: l'escargot, l'université. This is called élision.

Unlike le and la, les does not have a contracted, reduced form. When les is followed by a word starting with a vowel, the normally silent final s of les is pronounced, making a /z/ sound. This additional sound linking two words is called liaison. Listen to the following examples:

Compulsory liaison with a vowel or silent h	No liaison with a consonant
les insectes les animaux les hommes	les tatous les fourmis

Note that élision and liaison occur with most words starting with h: l'homme, les hommes, l'hiver, les hivers. Exceptions to this rule are words beginning with an aspirate 'h'.

to identify a specific noun

The definite article is used to identify a specific noun or to refer to a noun that has already been specified.

Corey: Tu connais la tour de l'Université du Texas?	Corey: Do you know the UT Tower?
--	----------------------------------

Tex: Bien sûr, c'est le symbole de l'Université!

Corey: Et la Sixième rue?

Tex: Eh bien, c'est les Champs-Elysées d'Austin!

Tex: Of course, it is the symbol of the University!

Corey: What about Sixth street?

Tex: Well, it's the Champs-Elysees of Austin.

to express general truths or concepts

French uses the definite article to express general truths or concepts. English, in contrast, uses no article at all. Compare the following sentences:

🔊 Tex: L'argent ne rend pas l'homme heureux!

Tammy: Tu as raison. L'amour et la santé sont plus importants!

Tex: Money does not make man happy!

Tammy: You are right. Love and health are more important!

Tex: Of course, for insects and animals, money does not exist! But love is as important for us as it is for humans. Ah, yes, love, love, love, always love!

to express likes and dislikes

The French also use the definite article with verbs of preference, such as aimer, préférer, détester. Once again, English omits the article in such general statements. For example:

🔊 Tex adore les croissants.

Joe-Bob préfère les doughnuts.

Tammy n'aime pas le café.

Edouard apprécie la bonne cuisine française.

Tex loves croissants.

Joe-Bob prefers doughnuts.

Tammy does not like coffee.

Edouard appreciates good French cuisine.

to indicate habitual recurrence

The definite article is used in French with moments of the day, days of the week, and seasons to indicate habitual recurrence. For example:

🔊 Le matin, Tammy va en cours.

L'après-midi, elle va à la bibliothèque.

Le lundi, Tex fait son jogging.

L'été, il se baigne avec Tammy à Barton

Every morning, Tammy goes to class.

Every afternoon, she goes to the library.

On Mondays, Tex goes for a jog.

Every summer, he bathes with Tammy at Springs. L'hiver, il skie à Purgatory.

Barton Springs. Every winter, he skis in Purgatory.

in a series

The article is usually repeated in a series, in contrast to English. For example:

🔊 Tammy: Tex, aide-moi à mettre la table!
Apporte les assiettes, les couteaux, les verres, les serviettes et le vin.

Tex, help me set the table! Bring the plates, knives, glasses, napkins, and wine.

no article

Cities usually do not require an article in French. For example:

🔊 Tex habite à Austin.
mais il préfère Paris.

Tex lives in Austin,
but he prefers Paris.

Continents, countries, states, regions, and oceans usually require an article (l'Afrique, la France, le Texas, la Bourgogne, l'Atlantique etc.), but there are a few exceptions, usually islands: Haïti, Israël, Madagascar. See prepositions with place names for more information.

Months never require an article: janvier, février, mars, etc.

🔊 Cependant Tex adore mars à Austin.
Nevertheless Tex adores March in Austin.

Days of the week do not require an article in instances where they do not indicate habitual recurrence. For example:

🔊 Lundi, il a rendez-vous avec Tammy.
Monday he has a date with Tammy.

Listen to the dialogue:

🔊 Tammy: J'aime beaucoup le français. C'est la langue de Molière et de Hugo, et surtout c'est la langue maternelle de Tex!

Tammy: I like French a lot. It is the language of Molière and of Hugo, and above all it is the mother tongue of Tex!

Bette: Alors comme ça Tammy, tu aimes bien les Français?

Bette: So Tammy, you really like French men?

Tammy: Oh oui! Surtout les Français qui portent le béret!

Tammy: I sure do! Especially French men who wear a beret!
